

“FROM THE DESK OF FATHER JONATHAN”

JANUARY 3, 2016

By now, I'm sure many of you--like me--have made one or more "New Year's Resolutions". There is something very human and spiritual about beginning anew. The new year comes and we think about how we can make it better than last year. What a great attitude! I'm sure whatever you have chosen as your resolution, is a good one, something that you need!

Can I make a suggestion, however, of something you might add to what you have resolved to do or change? Think of the one or two people in your life whom you could love better. Usually there is someone close to us whom we take for granted. Perhaps it is someone we live with, or work with, or a relative who lives near or far away. What might you be able to do for them this year? How might God be calling you to serve them or love them more or better?

There is no greater "self-improvement" than focusing on our relationships, specifically what we can do to love the people God has put into our lives.

Wishing you and your family a blessed 2016!

Merry Christmas and Happy New Year!!

Father Jonathan
